KESTONE MEDIATION CENTRE & CONSULTANCY

Land, Property & Real Estate Mediation

A practical introduction

Mediation offers parties a structured, impartial setting to discuss property-related disagreements and explore options. Participation is voluntary; parties retain control over whether they reach an agreement and what that agreement says.

Common areas for discussion

- Land ownership, occupation, boundaries, and rights of way
- Land sale, purchase completion, and agent-related concerns
- Landlord and tenant issues, leases, deposits, and repairs
- Real estate development, off-plan delivery, and construction delays
- Property management, rental accounting, and service charges
- Commercial property and joint real estate investments

A typical process

1. Enquiry and initial conversation about process and suitability.
2. Preliminary assessment of the issues and participants.
3. Invitation to participate and mediator appointment, where appropriate.
4. A facilitated session; parties may record any agreement reached.

IMPORTANT: Use online enquiry forms for preliminary details only.

Do not upload or transmit sensitive evidence or confidential legal documents.

General information only. Kestone mediation does not replace independent legal advice.